Welcome to Howe Gardens

You are always welcome at HOWE GARDENS, where you can choose varieties that please you most.

For those not able to visit us, this list will help in a selection of varieties. If you feel the need of some help in a selection to meet your particular needs, feel free to write us.

We specialize in Daylilies and grow most of the good ones as they are introduced. As stock permits, we will list the better varieties. In the meantime, we may be able to supply you with some "hard to get" variety if you write us.

Our Iris list is not long, but as we grow many more our local iris customers will have a large selection from which to choose.

We do not offer cash discounts, but do supply good plants at a reasonable price, and welcome your suggestions on extra plants, which we ship with all orders.

The Iris bloom will be at its best the first week in June, and Daylilies will be at their peak in July, although you will see some in bloom "from spring 'till frost."

O. R. Howe, Jr.

Daylilies

The ever increasing interest is now at a stage where Daylilies are proving themselves our most popular perennial for a wealth of bloom in the garden "from spring until frost."

Daylilies are easy to grow, but like all flowers appreciate a little care. A few brief cultural directions to the novice may help.

Plant your Daylilies in any place you have available, at any time that the ground is not frozen. Early spring and fall are the best times and a medium heavy soil is ideal. If soil is light and sandy, add peat, compost, or well rotted manure for humus. If soil is heavy or lacks good drainage lighten with sand or peat, and mound up your beds.

When planting, spread the roots and set crown (where foliage and roots meet) no deeper than one inch. Roots and tops of plants should be trimmed quite severely to induce new growth.

Daylilies need little, if any fertilizer at planting time. Use a complete fertilizer on established plants in early spring and late summer. Daylilies need phosphate and potash, but little nitrogen. I often use 0-14-14 on late fall set plants to induce root growth.

Watering is not needed, except on newly set plants until they are established. Under drought conditions, water will, however, give better bloom and deeper colors.

Winter protection is needed only on late fall set plants or tender evergreen varieties. Here in cold New England, we use pine needles, salt marsh hay, or some other light material around the plants, not over them. A summer mulch will help conserve moisture and keep down weeds.

Most Daylilies are hardy in all regions, although some varieties do better in some regions than they do in others. Evergreen varieties as a rule do better in the South, but many do well in cold climates, so that only those tender varieties that need winter protection here, will be marked EV.
